CONTRACT OF STREET, ST

THE issue between the Abingdon Virginian and the National Union is a matter of grave public interest, and we cannot consent to remain neutral in regard thereto, Properly narrowed down, the issue is between the continuance of the administration of Gen. Mahoue, ap to the Va. & Tenn. R. R., and the reverting of that great public improvement to the party having previous control of it, and to the latter alternative many besides ourselves cannot consent. The Virginian essays a defence of Col. Owen, and, after asserting that a unanimous vote of thanks was tendered that officer by the Stockholders at the last meeting, charges the loss of the through mail to Gen. Maltone, and then, strange to say, acquits bim of all blame in the matter by charging it to wind and water, which he says rendered it "next to an impossibility for near two months to make time over the road." That jourpal also charges that the "increase of "tonuage and passengers over the road " is attributable to the increased pro-"duction in the country, and the in-"and not to Gen. Mahone's manage Col. Owen (who, to speak in general terms, has paid nothing promptly since the war) and the increased tonnage and show the figures. travel. The length of the Virginian's articl eprevents our giving its views in full.

In refraining from any animadversion upon the management of the late President, the National Union has obeyed a feeling of delicacy which the friends of Gen. Mahone are proud to have been actuated by in their treatment of this Railroad question. This good example seems, however, not to have been observed by the friends of Col. Owen, who persist in bringing him antagonistically forward as their beau ideal of a Railroad President.

Yet he had recently alregated contracts which were autumn, when wood should have been procured for the entire winter's use .-In the treasury were $99.20 in money. Some of the engines and cars were under levy and in charge of U. S.
